HOPED TO WIN FAME AS A PAINTER OF PICTURES

Talented Young Chinese Artist of Honolulu Who Perished in the Rio Disaster.

THE accompanying photograph is that of Cheong Young, the talented young Chinese artist who perished with the other unfortunates in the sinking of the steamship Rio de Janeiro on Washington's birthday. Cheong Young was but 19 years of age, and during a five years' course at Mills Institute, this City, made rapid progress and exhibited remarkable talent in art. He was a protégé of Mrs. Helen Kelly, and also studied art under Dr. Howard Hitchcock. He had many friends and all who knew him took a great interest in him because of his amiable character and his pronounced talent. When he met his death on the ill-starred Rio he was on his way to San Francisco, where he intended entering upon a course of art study at the Hopkins Art School for several years, with the intention of making painting his life-work. He had ahead of him a most promising career, and was ambitious and talented. He had a matter of deep regret and grief to all who knew him that he was not spared to enter upon the serious work for which he had labored for five years. It is certain that he would have made a brilliant success. Several of his paintings have been exhibited by the Art League here, and his teachers speak of him as possessing great genius. He leaves three brothers and an aged father to mourn his untimely death. A memorial service was held at Mills Institute Sunday afternoon by his friends.

SCARCITY OF TRAMPS.

There are fewer tramps in the country today than I have ever known during my twelve years of railroad work. I sold a Chicago man whose work necessitates his traveling on all kinds of trains in all parts of the country the other day. "The tramp is an institution that has come to stay in America, but in times of industrial depression his numbers are far more numerous. There is a certain class of professional tramps who neither want nor expect to secure employment, but their number is very limited compared with the great army of unemployed that was traveling over the country a few years ago. Today the number of tramps is at a minimum. Practically every man who wants employment can get it, and I know that in a great many places the supply of labor is not equal to the demand."

A CHURCH'S ANNIVERSARY.

One of New York's historic churches, the Broadway Tabernacle, celebrated its sixtieth anniversary recently. The tabernacle, which is located in the heart of the Tenderloin, was the outgrowth of a great revival movement. It had a stirring history during the Civil war and no church in the country was more closely engaged in the great moral conflict with slavery for twenty years preceding Lincoln's emancipation. One Sunday night $30,000 was raised after the usual services to equip a regiment for the front. During the riots of July, 1863, it was with difficulty that a mob was prevented from burning the building, so pronounced was the attitude of the members. The church has the unique reputation of having given $400,000 to objects of benevolence during twenty-six years. It is a dingy, time-stained structure, located at Thirty-fourth street and Broadway, within a stone's throw of the Waldorf-Astoria.

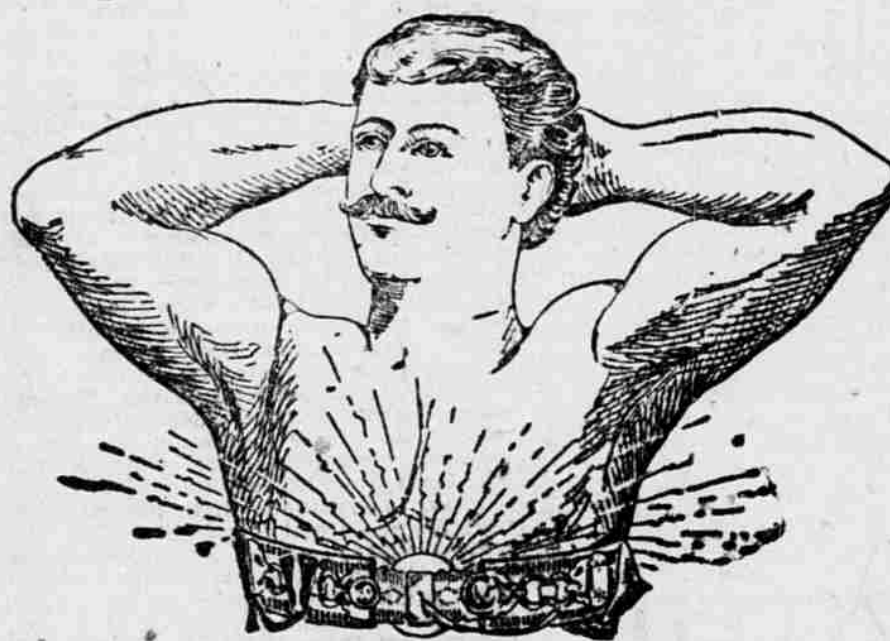

and in the very heart of upper New York's glitter and gaiety.

DULL, INDEED.

"To say that news is scarce," writes the Parkhurst correspondent of the Kennebec (Me.) Journal, "is putting it mild. The young folks have about all gone away for the winter, the hired girls have gone home and hired men have gone to the woods. There has been no courting, tattling, getting married or increase in the population since election. The old folks that are doing the chores and running the thing are going to live as long as they can. The peddlers and preachers have forsaken us; the hens won't lay; the horses are too lazy to run away, and there are no dogs to bark; so what the dickens is there to write about?"

Recently the Boers wrecked the train following the one General Kitchenier traveled in.
